Rival Amazon India roped in over 150 influencers to introduce live commerce just ahead of the festive season in 2022. Others like Flipkart's Myntra collaborated with leading fashion and beauty influencers to host 350 live sessions on Instagram.

Even new-age D2C brands, particularly in the beauty & personal care space, are marrying content and commerce on short-video apps to improve user engagement, increase conversions and eventually drive sales. Personal care brands like Mamaearth, mCaffeine and Plum have built 'influencer-first' marketing strategies through active online communities. Cosmetics majors like Nykaa and SUGAR have used tutorials and make-up related content on short-video apps to build a loyal user base.

BRANDS' BUDGETS FOR INFLUENCER MARKETING HAVE GONE UP FROM 10-15 PER CENT A FEW YEARS AGO TO 25-30 PER CENT IN 2022, PER REDSEER

Redseer says the Top 5 product categories in which users purchase a product after seeing influencer content are fashion (67 per cent), beauty & personal care (42 per cent), packaged food & beverages (37 per cent), electronics (35 per cent), and fitness (25 per cent). Short-video apps have, thus, managed to shorten customer decision journeys from brand awareness to purchase. BT

Investors are again looking favourably at Adani Group firms after the group's moves to reduce debt

BY ASHISH RUKHAIYAR

► DEVELOPMENTS RELATED TO the Adani Group are generally quick and significant. If the decline following the publication of the Hindenburg report on January 23 was sharp—the group's overall worth plummeted by more than $100 billion in just a matter of days—the recovery, partial as of now, has been equally swift.

Shares of all 10 listed firms of the group are currently trading higher than their respective the touch-me-not attitude has been removed," says Arun Kejriwal of Kejriwal Research & Investment Services.

Analysts say the market has taken solace from the fact that the money that has come to the promoter entities from the GQG transaction has been immediately deployed to reduce the group's loan burden and release pledged shares. Earlier this month, the group said it had repaid share-based 52-week lows touched in February. For instance, shares of Adani Enterprises, at ₹2,039.65 on March 8, have more than doubled from their recent low.

Experts attribute the recovery to several factors, including GQG Partners putting in over ₹15,000 crore and the Supreme Court bringing in clarity in terms of a time-bound probe into the allegations. "Post validation of the investor putting in over ₹15,000 crore, financing of ₹7,374 crore and prepaid the debts of $500 million (nearly ₹4,100 crore) it had taken to finance the acquisition of Ambuja Cements. More importantly, it said that it would be prepaying all such remaining loans by end-March.

Unsurprisingly, shares of some of the Adani Group firms have been hitting upper circuits regularly. BT
