

YOUNG MGM HEALTHCARE, CHENNAI TRANSFORMING HEALTHCARE WITH FUTURISTIC BENCHMARKS OF EXCELLENCE

As Director, MGM Healthcare, Dr Prashanth Rajagopalan, has been instrumental in the spectacular success of the Chennai based brand within a span of 4 years of its inception. A qualified doctor, Masters in Hospital Management from John Hopkins University, USA and Health Economics from London School of Economics, his keen interest in Technology, Healthcare and Education, loads him with acumen in every levels of management of the 400 bedded state-of-the-art hospital in Tamil Nadu. A master strategist, he steered MGM Healthcare to bag USGBC LEED platinum certification, making it the first such hospital in the country and the highest rated green hospital in Asia.

MGM Healthcare is a fledgling four years old. What did it take you to make it successful in so short a time?

We started by hand-picking excellent clinicians to create dynamic teams, resulting in many firsts to our credit. Today, MGM Healthcare runs the country's largest heart and lung transplant programme within two years of the launch of the hospital. We are again the first ones not only in India, but also South Asia to have done solid organ transplant across the spectrum of specialities within the first year of starting the hospital. Apart from following a clear mandate of carrying on with everyday critical and routine work on cardiac, orthopaedics, neuro surgery, we were also determined to create 'Centres of Excellence' similar to world famous hospitals in the west and have quality care national referral programmes, for organ transplant and critical work for all specialties, which are not available in many hospitals across the country.

How did you overcome the challenges while setting up MGM Healthcare?

We adopted some of the best protocols and clinical standards, where again MGM Healthcare is among the 30-40 hospitals in the country that has both, Joint Commission International (JCI) accreditation for patient safety and quality standards, as well as its Indian equivalent, the NABH accreditation. These accreditations were fundamental to MGM Healthcare for ensuring the highest critical
