

India's start-up scene is blazing a trail to the top of the world's economic ranks. With over 100 unicorns and counting, valued at a staggering $340 billion, India's start-up ecosystem is already the third-largest in the world. But this is just the beginning.

Start-ups now achieve $100 million in revenue in just five years, a significant improvement from the 18 years it took in 2000, reveals a new report by RedSeer Strategy Consultants. As these young companies continue to mature and grow, they are expected to have a significant impact on both financial growth and societal progress, propelling India forward on the global stage.

BHARAT TAKING CENTRE STAGE

Building for Bharat, or the population outside of India's major cities, is a huge opportunity. Often referred to as the "next billion" users, this segment represents a significant portion of India's population. Building solutions for Bharat has today emerged as a significant opportunity; earlier it was viewed as just a social cause. Start-ups are flocking to this seg-