

RAZER ENKI

$536.39

This gaming chair will ensure that long hours of playing games don't hurt your back

UNLIMITED GAMING

Let's face it: when gaming, one usually loses track of time. But the after-effects of sitting in the wrong posture for long hours can give you a lifetime of pain. Invest in an ergonomic gaming chair that offers good support to your neck, and has adjustable armrests. Take Razer's Enki, for example. It offers a combination of 110-degree extended shoulder arches and a 21-inch ultra-wide seat base, which ensures optimal weight distribution for long gaming sessions. Plus, the lumbar curve provides good support to your lower back. The best feature, possibly, is the chair's ability to let users recline at up to 152 degrees, without having to fiddle with knobs or buttons. Game on, unlimited!

Available on: amazon.com

7Tech today

GAME CHANGERS

Gaming is serious business. And it's not just about the system; your accessories, too, play a vital role in how you game. Ambient lights, a gaming chair, gaming headphones and the like elevate your experience to the next level

BY NIDHI SINGAL

THE 'IN' THING

Gamers swear by their input devices. And if you're a PC gamer, the keyboard and mouse are your best friends. Like this mechanical keyboard from HyperX that comes with custom-designed keys for a shorter travel time, great responsiveness and accuracy. The RGB backlit keys also feature customisable lighting. And you can pair this with a mouse like the AW610M from Alienware. This dual-mode RGB mouse has seven programmable buttons. It also has a polling rate of 1,000Hz to keep up with your fast moves and is easy to use for long hours.

Available on: amazon.in