

THE YEAR OF COMEBACK OR A DEEPER MALAISE?

Udayan Mukherjee
(left) with

Samir Arora, Founder,
Helios Capital

» If China and the US markets are doing well, then India's external cash flow will be positive or flat

» In today's times, having a concentrated portfolio is a recipe for disaster

» Choosing concentrated stocks is not a formula, it's a lottery. Picking a lottery number is never a strategy

» Typically, one can have 30 names in their portfolio with 10 big names and 20 mid-caps or new names

PRIVATE EQUITY INVESTMENT TRENDS IN EMERGING MARKETS

Manisha Girotra (left),
CEO, Moelis India

Sanjay Mehta, Founder
& Partner, 100X.VC

» There are always excesses in the market, which rationalise; it's a cycle. These are the times when the next giants of India will be born and new unicorns get germinated

» From a fundraising perspective, the euphoria has mellowed but investing continues. This is the time firms can get good talent at a great value, and bring down customer acquisition costs

» The kind of sentiments flowing in the public markets typically don't exist in the venture capital market

(From left) Shankar Sharma, Founder of GQuant Investech; Anil Kaushal, Business Head of LupinLife; and Mukund Mudras, CEO & Co-founder of Heckyl Technologies; in conversation with Rahul Kanwal at the Market Today event

INVESTING BEYOND INDIAN HORIZONS

Neil Parag Parikh, Chairman and CEO,
PPFAS AMC

» When we talk about Nasdaq, we need to differentiate between mature tech firms and new-age ones. During the pandemic, many new tech stocks without any fundamentals went up. But there is still some pain left there

» Indians have a home-country bias. We are comfortable investing here. The reason you go abroad is to reduce risks, and not to get great returns

» What investors gain by having a portfolio outside is that inter-national markets move in very different directions than Indian markets. That provides the necessary diversification and flexibility

» When it comes to investing internationally, you must have the patience to ride the ups and downs. Invest in something you understand and is simple

Pratik Oswal, Head (Passive Funds),
Motilal Oswal AMC