PET CARE GOES HI-TECH

With people getting back to offices, it could be tough to leave your pet alone at home or spend as much time with it as when you worked from home. Worry not as technology is here to help you attend to your pet

BY NIDHI SINGAL

A NANNY FOR PUPS

If your pet stays at home alone for long periods, get it a nanny, albeit an electronic one. While regular security cameras can do the job just fine, this device is designed for pups. Featuring enhanced night vision, the auto dog tracking function tracks your pup as it moves around the room, and alerts you if it barks. The two-way talking feature will help you calm your pup, plus you can reward it with a treat anytime. Its app is available for both iOS and Android devices.

FOLLOW THE PAWS

Pets love running around, especially when outdoors. Attach this nifty device to their collar and you'll be able to track your pet's location in real time. This tracker comes with a pre-installed countrywide SIM card and can send your pet's live location every 30 seconds to your mobile phone; you're also notified if your pet strays out of pre-set regions (such as home, neighbourhood, or backyard). It comes with a two-month subscription; after the free period, it costs ₹149 a month.
