

3

1. Soho House Mumbai members can connect to global members through the private Soho House app, helping them widen their network globally and locally

2. Jolie's has an outdoor lounge with a mini-golf turf

3. The Quorum has an art programme that serves as a platform for established and amateur artists and Mumbai-based club. "The Quorum was born out of the idea to create a quintessential 'third space'. Inspired by the global renaissance in the members' club industry, we wanted a creatively designed space that caters to a diverse community of like-minded folks," says Founder and CEO Vivek Narain, adding that the club is planning to expand to two more cities over the next couple of years. While The Quorum's members are ideally aged between 35 and 55 years, they have recently seen an upswing in the below-30 and below-35 age groups. "We have never had to really work to strike a gender balance... Over the years we've seen an equal number of men and women, across industries and profiles," says Narain. The Quorum membership committee looks for discerning individuals with a global sensibility, who are front runners in their fields. "For us, your background isn't as important as the future you want to create; and that truly encapsulates our vibe," says Narain.

On their 50th wedding anniversary, Anita and Kamal Meattle, Chairman Emeritus of Paharpur Business Centre, wanted to do something special for their children and gifted them membership of The Chambers, the Taj Mahal Hotels' exclusive business club. Over the years in its corridors of power, captains of industry rubbed shoulders with diplomats, lawyers and the like. But now as it seeks to draw younger blood, it has undergone a transformation. The Chambers at Taj Mahal New Delhi opened in a whole new swankier avatar last year. It is now spread over two floors, has a members-only restaurant serving European food, a new stylish bar with a display of hand-picked offerings, a cigar lounge with a limited-edition selection, a Stefano Ricci-designed meeting room (plus six others), dinnerware from Bernardaud, glassware from Riedel, and similar elements that connote luxury. And, symbolic of the new luxury befitting our times, a new Swedish air purification system. "The Chambers has undergone a transformation to meet the aspirations of the younger, bolder generation of entrepreneurs and creative minds across business, science and arts. The central tenets of privacy, exclusivity and the propensity for plush décor remain," says Satyajeet Krishnan, Area Director and General Manager of Taj Mahal New Delhi. Membership starts at ₹20 lakh and can be passed on to one's children. The Chambers is now available at eight destinations, with the latest one at The Taj St. James' Court in London.

As a new generation of start-up entrepreneurs, next-gen business family scions and young professionals look for a space to 'chill' with like-minded people, new-age private clubs come to their aid. BT

@smitabw