

A FASHION CONCEPT

Foldable smartphones are still considered niche. But Honor's latest take on the foldable phone provides a glimpse into a fashionable future. Meet the Honor V Purse concept phone, a phone-to-purse device that mimics a handbag (only 9 mm when folded) with its customisable, outward facing always-on displays. It comes with attachments such as straps, feathers and tassels that make the phone the ideal accessory for any fashionista. The phone with the interchangeable straps/chains, which clip onto its hinge, is sure to redefine fashionable consumer electronics for users.

Mobile Entertainment

While smartphones and tablets are ubiquitous now, LG has taken the portable electronics trend a step ahead at the IFA 2023 by unveiling a TV you can carry around with you. The StandbyME Go is a 27-inch 1,080p LCD TV neatly ensconced in a suitcase, which includes a built-in battery that gives up to three hours of viewing time, and a 20-watt speaker, making it a perfect entertainment companion for any outdoor setting. Its touchscreen can be tilted, rotated, raised and lowered, while viewing it in landscape and portrait orientations, and table mode. Powered by LG's webOS software, it also supports AirPlay and is compatible with iOS and Android devices for screen-mirroring. It also supports pairing via Bluetooth and Wi-Fi.

SUNNY SOUND

Swedish lifestyle brand Urbanista has debuted the Mailbu, a self-charging, sustainable sound companion. This compact speaker—made of recycled plastic and materials—is also the world's first solar charging wireless speaker with integrated Powerfoyle solar cell technology. When exposed to indoor or outdoor light, the Mailbu charges itself. And it can be used almost anywhere, with its IP67 rating that makes it fully waterproof and protected against sand, dust and dirt. There is also a Malibu mobile companion app that lets users customise equaliser bands and keep track of its live light-charging and historical data.
