

Patience, too, was a hallmark. The meeting in Hyderabad was consumed in helping delegates understand what this forum was all about. It was only at the second meeting in Sikkim in March that discussions kicked off in earnest. Those discussions then came to fruition at the third meeting in Goa, where the forum released a policy document with some broad recommendations.

First, the forum called for a global definitional framework for start-ups and a policy framework to strengthen ecosystems within and across G20 nations. Second, it suggested forming global alliances to improve market access and measures to nudge organisations, both government and private, to work with these firms. Third, it asked G20 nations to commit $1 trillion in annual investment for start-ups by 2030 and ease the cross-border flow of capital. Fourth, it urged countries to improve inclusion by providing special attention to start-ups led by entrepreneurs from under-represented groups. These recommendations were published at Startup20's final meeting in Gurugram held in July.

DEFINITION FRAMEWORK

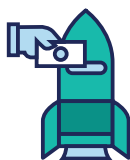

Vaishnav says that at the beginning, task force members felt that they should come up with a common definition for the word 'start-up'. However, as discussions progressed, they realised that this was not pragmatic as countries had different regulatory frameworks. And so, they decided to provide a common definitional framework. It comprises five components: type of legal entity, year of inception, size, scalability, and innovation. This, says Vaishnav, is of paramount importance. "It will somehow accommodate all the

POLICY PLATFORM

- 1 Startup20 is the official engagement forum started under India's presidency in 2023
- 2 It aims to provide the global start-up ecosystem a platform to raise concerns and challenges
- 3 It has three task forces —foundation & alliances; finance; and inclusion & sustainability

TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATIONS

Raise joint annual investment in the start-up ecosystem by G20 nations to $1 trillion by 2030

Build a networked institution of existing nodal agencies across G20 nations

Measure the efficacy of Startup20 to help G20 nations identify promising start-ups globally

Continue this engagement group in future G20 presidencies
