

REVIEW

Most people agree that the Fold is a productivity workhorse. But the one complaint most had was about its bulk. But with the Z Fold5, the chassis has been slimmed down, making it easy to carry, without compromising on productivity. It is perhaps the perfect fusion of a phone and a tablet.

Cover screen: The tall and vibrant 6.2-inch secondary screen on the cover functions like a regular smartphone, with all apps running normally, even when the phone is folded.

Main screen: Unfold the Z Fold5 to reveal a 7.6-inch screen, perfect for productivity apps like spreadsheets. Best of all, it is comfortable to hold in one hand, making content consumption on the large screen a breeze. With a split keyboard layout for convenient typing, I could skim through documents with elan. Powered by the Snapdragon 8 Gen 2 processor, multitasking is also a breeze—I was able to open multiple apps at the same time and work on them side-by-side. It would have been perfect if only Samsung had bundled the S Pen with this device. And even with all this heavy lifting, the battery had about 20 per cent charge left after a day's work.

Flex mode: For a hands-free experience, the Z Fold5 has the Flex mode, in which the top half of the screen serves for content viewing, while the bottom half becomes a handy space for controls and other tasks. This proves particularly convenient for tasks like working on emails, watching videos or even taking selfies. However, not all apps are customised for use in the Flex mode.

Camera: Samsung has gone with the same camera configuration as the last time, three cameras on the rear, one on the cover screen and another one on the main screen. While the rear cameras do an excellent job in bright and low light, the one on the cover screen does a decent job; but the one on the main screen needs improvement.

► SPECS: 154.9x129.9x6.1 MM; 154.9x67.1x13.4 MM (FOLDED); 7.6-INCH SCREEN; 6.2-INCH COVER DISPLAY; 253 GM; ANDROID 13; 50MP + 12MP + 10MP; 10MP COVER CAMERA; 4MP IN-DISPLAY CAMERA; 4,400MAH BATTERY

Verdict: If you're looking for a flagship phone that can double up as a tablet to enhance productivity, the Z Fold5 is for you. BT

Available on: samsung.com/in @nidhisingal

| 129

SAMSUNG
GALAXY Z FOLD5
From ₹1,54,999

If you want a flagship phone that will boost your productivity, get this one

