India as the Mother of Democracy. Our phenomenal soft power is being absorbed by the world.

India's presidency of the G20 has been in the backdrop of the Russia-Ukraine war. How far has it been possible to keep the discussions focussed on economic and development issues and away from the political agenda?

It has not been necessary to offset any political agenda. The G20 is not a forum to discuss bilateral geopolitical issues. All members converge on developmental priorities that address concerns of a global nature.

The G20 priorities for 2023 include green development, climate finance and LiFE, accelerated inclusive and resilient growth, accelerating progress on Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), technological transformation and digital public infrastructure, multilateral institutions for the 21st century and women-led development. How much progress has been made on these as part of the deliberations?

Our presidency's goal of bringing the G20 together as a problem-solver for cascading and interlinked crises for a resilient, sustainable and inclusive world are rooted in adopting a cross-cutting approach across working groups (WGs) in a whole-of-government approach. We will aim to drive a broader consensus on a majority of our outcomes during these meetings. Some of the areas where we have achieved a broader consensus are:

On green development, elements such as the principles of LiFE were adopted by the Development Ministerial while others, including disaster risk reduction, green hydrogen ecosystem and alternate fuels, ambitious renewable energy targets and mobilisation of adequate climate finance are being discussed at the relevant WGs in both Finance and Sherpa tracks.

On SDGs, India's presidency has been vocal about the reversal of progress on SDGs and [we] are committed to getting the world to deliver on them. In line with our priority, the Development Ministerial has adopted the 2023 Action Plan on Accelerating Progress on SDGs, which is bound to pave the path for all our interconnected priorities.

On climate finance, we are also strongly deliberating on continuing to rapidly scale up global climate finance, considering the principle of CBDR-RC (Common but Differentiated Responsibilities and Respective Capabilities) and we will aim to scale up and balance climate finance towards both adaptation and mitigation measures. We have also called on to set a New Collective Quantified Goal (NCQG) of climate finance in 2024, from a floor of $100 billion a year.
