

PHOTOS BY BJÖRN WALLANDER

Dream Theatre

Designer Sabyasachi Mukherjee's Mumbai store is a manifestation of his maximalist vision of Indian history, art and culture

BY SMITA TRIPATHI

I have often said I see myself as a ferryman between the past and the future. India is such a reservoir of history, art and culture—and I believe that for culture to be relevant it needs to be dynamic,” says Sabyasachi Mukherjee, one of the country's leading fashion designers. And his most recent store in Mumbai, which opened to the public on April 18, is a manifestation of this vision. The brand's largest flagship yet, the store is sprawled over 25,000 sq. ft and housed in the majestic neo-classical ICP Fort Heritage build-