WHAT SET OFF THE WAVE OF PAIN?

After the Covid-19 pandemic's disruption, people focus more on staying in shape, according to a survey of 700 consumers across 12 cities by Pronto Consult, a consulting firm that works with companies across sectors, including healthcare.

According to the survey, more than 51 per cent of the respondents said health is a priority for them, compared with only 11 per cent in the pre-lockdown era. The study found that chronic pain, muscle injury, post-surgery recovery, and sports-related injuries were the primary reasons for using muscle relaxants.

"The muscle relaxant market in India is experiencing steady growth due to various factors, such as an increase in musculoskeletal disorders, a rising geriatric population, changing lifestyles, and growing awareness of healthcare," says Karishma Shah, Founder and Managing Partner of Pronto Consult.

The survey found that 83 per cent of consumers felt the motivation to take a pain- or muscle-related drug was to improve their quality of life. The researchers studied the bills and found that topical applications were the most purchased, with Volini being the most bought brand across retail stores.

Hari Natarajan, Founder and Managing Partner at Pronto Consult, says the sports medicine market, driven by medicines that offer quick relief, has been growing at a fast clip.
