With "One District two Products", local farmers and craftsmen would get self-employment opportunities on one hand and on the other hand, world-class identity of local produce would be created in every district."

This grassroots initiative of CM Dhami was noticed and lauded at a recent display of the products from Uttarakhand's One District One Product (ODOP) Scheme at an exhibition held in Delhi. Possibly the ODTP products would be selected for exclusive gifting purposes to the delegates participating at the G20 summit being held in different cities of India. This was reportedly stated by the State's Industries Director, Sudhir Nautiyal at an event organised by Invest India, an agency of Department for Promotion of Industry and Internal Trade (DPIIT) to promote ODOP initiative in the state. Informing about ODOP's aim, the representative from the Invest India, Jigisha Tiwary reportedly said that it is Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision to connect districts of India to the world considering which the initiative was launched four years ago. She also informed, "At present, 765 districts from across the country are registered under the initiative with 1,072 indigenous products. Uttarakhand also has 13 products from 13 districts under ODOP. For now, ODOP is an initiative and not funded like a full-fledged scheme but we work efficiently to give products a platform under the initiative and act as a bridge between buyers and artisans, organic farmers and local industrialists among others at domestic and international level. Products also need proper exposure to reach consumers at national and international level considering which, we are working to bring maximum products under the initiative to Government e-Marketplace (GeM). It aims to promote local artisans and others and give them well deserving and necessary visibility for their products."

Sudhir Nautiyal is said to have shared that the state government of Uttarakhand has been concerted and consistently working on improving the quality of products and their under the ODTP scheme since its launch in 2021. He also said, "Considering the diversity of each district of the State, we decided to select two products because we know how many distinct products we have in forms of art, farming and culture. We are the first state to do so in the country." He informed that the government is also considering opening common facilities centres, raw material banks and data centres to store necessary data under ODTP initiative in districts as per the requirement. He also said that the state has also applied for geographical indication (GI) tags for artistic candles from Nainital, Kumaoni Rangwali Pichhaura and wooden temple replicas of Char Dham temples as souvenirs among many other products to get them identified under ODOP.

Since the ODTP scheme was rolled out nearly two years and the commitment shown by the Uttarakhand Government to make it a success, the scheme has generated interest and hope in the local communities of a better and brighter future.
