

Reinventing B-schools in the Age of AI

- (From left) Sourav Majumdar, with
- Bharat Bhasker, Director, IIMA
 - Bhaskar Chakrabarti, Dean (Academic), IIMC
 - Varun Nagaraj, Dean, SPJIMR
 - Sangeeta S. Bhardwaj, Acting Director, MDI Gurgaon
 - S. George, Director, XLRI Jamshedpur

Bharat Bhasker said that technologies like AI are no match for management professionals as they are valued for their decision-making, creating leadership values, and people skills

Bhaskar Chakrabarti said educational institutions should focus on creating a thread of skill development as the ecosystem within which students will be working in is going to be dynamic

Varun Nagaraj said in today's age of evolving tech landscape, the focus should remain on the fundamentals of thinking in a critical manner, connecting dots in ways that might not be normally possible, and exercising good judgement

Highlighting the current pace of tech evolution, Sangeeta S. Bhardwaj said that apart from teaching students about emerging tech like AI, they also need to be taught about ethics and leadership in AI with an eye on future requirements

New Trends in Future of Work

- (From left) Shailendra Bhatnagar, Chief Analyst and Editor, Markets, BT TV
- Priyanka Anand, Vice President & Head of HR, Market Area South East Asia, Oceania & India, Ericsson
 - Shailesh Singh, Senior Director & Chief People Officer, Max Life Insurance
 - Prabir Jha, Founder & CEO, Prabir Jha People Advisory
 - N.S. Rajan, Former CHRO, Tata Sons

Priyanka Anand said the focus of employers has shifted to offering flexibility and ensuring that employees have the autonomy to decide how they work

N.S. Rajan said that the evolving nature of the workforce, how work is being done and the nature of work itself, has made getting work done extremely fluid and what really matters now is to figure out how to get work done seamlessly

Calling culture a multiplier of the ways to achieve goals, Shailesh Singh said even though technology may evolve, culture can integrate employees towards a common goal

Prabir Jha said that C-suite leaders need to be curious, innovative, courageous, and master influencers to be able to grow their enterprises without avoidable risks