

E-GROCERY TROUNCES FOOD DELIVERY

It's clear from these numbers why Zomato and Swiggy are gunning for the e-grocery market

— E-grocery* — Online food delivery

*Excludes beauty and personal care; e-grocery figures reflect an aggressive growth scenario; Online food delivery numbers include order volumes of all online food delivery players in India—aggregators and independent cloud kitchens and branded food services players

Source: RedSeer

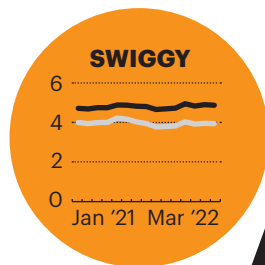

A CLOSE RACE

Since the first lockdown in April 2020, Swiggy has given tough competition to Zomato, and now earns a greater share of their combined revenue from food delivery

Figures are share of combined gross transaction value (GTV) in per cent; Based on email receipts data; Source: Measurable AI

GAME OF DISCOUNTS

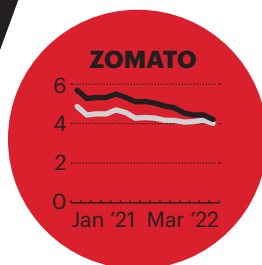

— Average price per order
— Average charged per order

Figures in $

Average price per order: Average amount billed on receipt per order before discount; Average charged per order: Average amount billed on receipt per order after discount; Based on email receipts data

Source: Measurable AI

In a two-horse race, discounting continues to be glue for customer loyalty

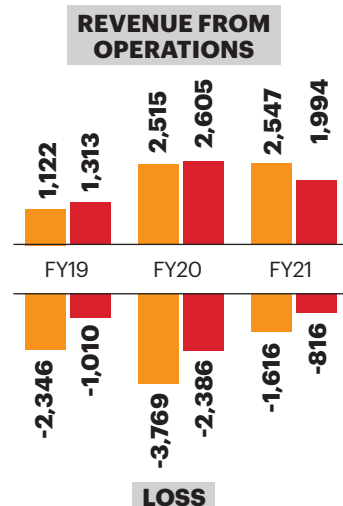

HOW THE NUMBERS STACK UP

In FY21, Swiggy took the lead in revenues, and has had more losses than Zomato the past three years

— Swiggy
— Zomato
Figures in ₹ crore

Source: Company filings

LOSS

GRAPHICS BY TANMOY CHAKRABORTY

mains to be the preferred food company in India,” Zomato’s Founder and CEO Deepinder Goyal asserted in a recent blog.

With restaurants as the fulcrum, Zomato has been experimenting with several products to create an ecosystem beyond food delivery services. Products such as Hyperpure, which provides ingredients and other supplies to restaurants; and the recently announced, ambitious 10-minute food delivery, are steps towards expanding its food horizon. As per its December quarter results, supply-chain business Hyperpure grew by 168 per cent year-on-year (YoY) and 40 per cent quarter-on-quarter (QoQ) to ₹160 crore. Present in nine cities, the company said it supplied to over 27,000 unique restaurants in the third quarter.

‘Zomato Instant’, the 10-minute food delivery service, is being piloted in Gurugram. “Nobody in the world has so far delivered hot and fresh