

H Moser & Cie Streamliner

Schaffhausen-based independent watchmaker H Moser & Cie has launched the world's blackest watch. Part of its Streamliner collection, the watch is covered in Vantablack, an innovative material used in astrophysics which is capable of absorbing 99.965 per cent of light. The watch is almost invisible, except for its white and red hands. This concept piece is not for sale as Vantablack is too fragile for wearing.
