

PICK THE RIGHT TAB

Tablets are back. Gone are the days when a premium tab meant only an iPad. Today, both Apple and Samsung offer solutions that can handle with aplomb whatever you throw at them. Read on to find out which will work for you—the Apple iPad Air or the Samsung Tab S8+

BY NIDHI SINGAL

A WORKHORSE CAN BE FUN

The undisputed king of tablets, Apple's iPad Air sits comfortably between the high-end iPad Pro and the entry-level iPad. The 10.9-inch screen is perfect for all activities—streaming videos, gaming, sketching, drawing or reading. Powered by Apple's M1 chip, it can handle all sorts of heavy graphics with no lag or stutter. Over the years, Apple has refined the iPadOS to bring the feel of the macOS to the tablet, including the dock at the bottom. Multitasking and split-screen usage are a cinch. Then there's the extended ecosystem pen-paper experience while drawing, sketching, colouring, taking notes and marking PDFs. While it works well with the regular pre-installed apps, creative professionals will be spoilt for choice with the plethora of paid- and free third-party apps available.

Productivity push: Pair the iPad Air with Apple's Magic Keyboard (₹27,900, sold separately) and you won't

► SPECS 10.9-inch LED display at 2,360x1,640p, Apple M1 chip, iPadOS 15, Wi-Fi and Bluetooth, up to 10 hours battery backup, 64 GB/256GB storage options, 461 gm of apps and games, designed and optimised for iPads.

Stroke Play: The latest iPad Air works with the second-gen Apple Pencil (₹10,900, sold separately), which snaps on the side for charging. Designed to work as a regular pencil, it supports pressure and tilt sensitivity, emulating a miss carrying a laptop. The strong magnets on the keyboard hold the iPad Air at an angle, which is adjustable, just like a laptop. The comfortable keyboard and a responsive trackpad with gesture support add to the ease of use.

Available on: apple.com/in

APPLE
IPAD AIR

₹54,900 for 64 GB

This 'middle-level' tablet is perfect for all activities and can replace a laptop