

High Stakes

Whether you are a collector of art, jewellery or watches, auctions are a great place to pick up such treasures. A look at some of the collectibles going under the hammer over the next few months

BY SMITA TRIPATHI

T

HERE is nothing more thrilling than an auction where fortunes change hands and treasures find new homes in a whirlwind of bids. It's not just about acquiring a possession, but a chance to own a piece of history or obtaining something rare. Auctions are becoming more popular year on year, so much so that Christie's global sales reached $8.4 billion in 2022, with 34 per cent new buyers being millennials. We look at some upcoming auctions being held across the globe but which give you the chance to bid online. Let the bidding battles begin.

KRISHEN KHANNA

AstaGuru is set to host three auctions in the month of December, exploring the many facets of both Modern and Contemporary Indian Art. The three auctions, namely the Modern Indian Art auction, the Contemporary Indian Art auction and the Collector's Choice auction, all explore exquisite works by renowned artists of the past and present. Moreover, some pieces of art are under No Reserve, which means there is no minimum price determined by the auction house for the artwork. For instance, the bidding for a stunning Krishen Khanna from the artist's Bandwallahs' series starts at ₹20,000. The auction will take place in the second week of December.

Estimated price: NA