
Some Gain So

Select firms from defence, railways, metals, renewables and PSUs have seen remarkable upswings in the last year, while IT and pharma sectors have bucked this trend BY RAHUL OBEROI

52 |

M

MORE THAN THREE decades after the first BT500 study—which ranks India's largest companies in terms of market capitalisation (m-cap)—was published in 1992, much has changed in the country's business landscape. Companies have evolved and grown much larger; they now serve varied markets; produce a range of goods and services; and go toe-to-toe with global peers. As a result, the stock market has also evolved substantially, reflected in the massive changes in the m-cap of many companies. For instance, the cumulative market value of the BT500 companies has surged nearly 259 times since the inaugural roster.

This year is no different. Thanks to the economic resilience, robust high-frequency indicators, and better-than-expected earnings of India Inc., the total m-cap of the BT500 companies has surged by over ₹10 lakh crore to ₹261.53 lakh crore dur-

