Championing Consensus

During its presidency, India reaffirmed the importance of the G20 as the premier forum for global economic co-operation, and reinforced trust in the multilateral system

WHEN INDIA ASSUMED the G20 presidency in December last year, Prime Minister Narendra Modi promised an inclusive, ambitious, action-oriented, and decisive presidency. In January 2023, during the Voice of the Global South Summit, he said India's presidency would reflect the voice and concerns of the Global South. And India has delivered on those promises.

The G20 New Delhi Leaders' Declaration (NDLD) promises strong, sustainable, balanced and inclusive growth, recognising the importance of private enterprises—especially micro, small and medium enterprises and start-ups—in driving innovation and employment. The declaration, adopted with full consensus, is a joint statement to the world from the leaders of the member nations.

Policies to support trade and investment and reform the WTO are areas where the leaders have committed to concrete action. India's G20 presidency has also delivered on both the climate and development agendas. We adopted the G20 Principles on Harnessing Data for Development, and produced an action plan to accelerate SDG progress. The G20 Deccan High-Level Principles (HLPs) on Food Security and Nutrition 2023, along with millets and other ancient grains, will help ensure global food and nutritional security. Also, we formed a Global Initiative on Digital Health (GIDH) and focussed on climate change's health effects.

By committing to the green development pact for a sustainable future, G20 leaders have committed to pursuing environmentally sustainable and inclusive economic growth. This is also crucial from the perspective of the Global South. We urge all nations to align their Nationally Determined Contributions (NDCs) with the temperature goal of the Paris Agreement. We have also urged countries to set economy-wide GHG reduction targets in their NDC cycles. G20 countries will also contribute to a successful conclusion of the first global stocktaking exercise at COP28, which will drive enhanced climate action. In energy transition, we have agreed to HLPs on hydrogen, collaboration on critical minerals, a global biofuels alliance, and we will pursue efforts to triple renewable energy capacity, among other priorities.

The NDLD drives climate action in an integrated manner, emphasising the importance of healthy ecosystems in addressing climate change, biodiversity loss and pollution. We have delivered a strong message about ending plastic pollution and reaffirmed the crucial role of the circular economy. Leaving India's imprint of sustainable living on the world, we have also agreed to HLPs on Lifestyles for Sustainable Development, which will contribute to significant emission reductions by 2030.
