

20 ft long. Inspired by the midnight sun in the polar regions, the screen set is created with brass sheets cut into long curvilinear flame-shaped strips that are given seam-like textures using brass deposit welding.

These are then welded together to create a radiating blaze. They are stratified with a dense layering of strips into giant floral forms emerging within the blaze. The monochrome of metallic yellow is broken by Pietra dura inlays of red jasper and black portoro marble orbs. The piece, spread to its full length, is a showstopper—one that silences all conversations and starts another. Price on request.
