

TIME HONoured TRADITION

ICONIC 19TH CENTURY Indian painter and artist Raja Ravi Varma is one of the favourites of Indian art. From cinema, to textiles and fashion, calendar art, to kitschy handbags and popular art adaptations, every aspect has a sprinkling of the artist's influence. Public interest in the artist and his acclaim as India's first modernist painter has grown with time—this time quite literally. Jaipur Watch Company, which describes itself as India's first bespoke watchmaker and the only Indian micro luxury watch brand, has launched a limited edition of 117 automatic watches with the dials bearing one of 14 different paintings of Raja Ravi Varma. Encased in a special grade stainless steel casing, the watch has a painting printed onto the inside sapphire crystal of the glass, like the one featuring 'Radha in the moonlight' by Raja Ravi Varma. Priced at ₹65,000, each watch comes along with a signed letter from Rama Varma, a direct descendent of the Raja Ravi Varma, authenticating the painting and its use on the watch dial. On the wrist, the watch is not just an artwork, but a Rasa, an extract of Indian-ness announcing your distinct taste.
