

QTZ SWIVEL BASE LOUNGE CHAIR – GOLD

► Now a home theatre has standardised seating. But other than the standard loungers, you could have your own ‘throne’. And what better than to get a chair or two from a limited collection, like the gold version of the QTZ Swivel Base Lounge Chair designed by Alexander Lotersztain—there are only five of them in the world! This work of art by the Argentina-born Australian designer and Founder of the multi-disciplinary design studio Derlot offers sumptuous seating, featuring soft, tactile textiles, the finest leather and velvet. Made of stainless steel, the chair’s main inspiration comes from naturally occurring geometric forms of quartz. The concept was born from Lotersztain’s passion for materials, technologies and craftsmanship. Price on request.

LOCKHEED LOUNGE

► There are sofas, and then there are some that are part of furniture history. How about one which featured in a music video in the 1990s with pop queen Madonna. The Lockheed Lounge, designed by Australian designer Marc Newson, is made of aluminium and fibreglass-reinforced plastic, and each piece took up to six months to make. And there are only around 10 of them in the world, with Madonna owning one of them. Newson made moulds of fibreglass from Lockheed’s form, and hammered thin sheets of pure aluminium on them to achieve the precise contours. If you manage to get your hands on one of these (one of them sold at an auction for $3.7 million some years ago), know that you own a part of pop history.
