

THE EPITOME OF REST

For instance, Conrad Bengaluru, a part of hotel chain Hilton Worldwide, offers sound-proof rooms, mattresses that reduce motion, a pillow menu that includes a variety of memory foam, body pillows, buckwheat pillows, etc., to help customise the sleep experience apart from the usual blackout curtains and temperature control. Soaked almonds are given during turndown service to induce a positive sleep cycle. Ben George, Senior VP & Commercial Director-Asia Pacific at Hilton, says when the hotel chain surveyed more than 10,000 travellers from nine countries for a global trends report, it found that “rest and relaxation will be the top driver of travel decisions across generations in 2024, leading us to coin it ‘The Year of the Great Recharge.’”

Then there is the sleep programme offered at the Six Senses Fort Barwara in Rajasthan, which is designed specifically for people looking for complete rejuvenation. Apart from wellness consultations, guests get a sleep tracker ring that helps their doctors understand issues with their sleep patterns. “A sleep kit with eye masks, Subtle Energies Bliss Blend oils, sleep balms, bath soaps and the Little Book of Reconnection is also provided,” says Mark Sands, VP of Wellness at Six Senses Hotels Resorts Spas. He adds that for those in need, compression boots are provided to help legs recover from exercise or travel, besides sound healing, sleepy teas and a wonder course meal with curated food. A three-night sleep programme along with stay here costs ₹32,813 for a single person, and ₹56,125 for a couple.

For those dreaming of a luxurious wellness retreat with a panoramic view of the Himalayan valley, Moksha Himalaya Spa Resort offers the right sleep solutions. “Our approach is rooted in the ancient wisdom of Ayurveda. We offer personalised guidance and techniques to help reset the sleep-wake cycle and establish healthy sleeping habits. We offer a 15-minute sauna before bedtime on the theory that lowering the body’s core temperature can promote better sleep,” says Nishant Taneja, its Head of Marketing. One needs to shell out ₹40,000 plus taxes for stay, breakfast and therapy here.

But for those looking to escape the fast lane of city life without leaving the city, Roseate Hotels and Resorts offers its guests soulful sound therapy to rejuvenate the body, mind, and soul before a massage that enhances a restful night’s sleep at Roseate House New Delhi. “Our turndown service has sleep-enhancing amenities such as essential oil diffusers to promote
