

▲
(Clockwise from top left)
Conrad Bengaluru offers
sound-proof rooms,
mattresses that reduce motion, etc., to enhance guests' sleep experiences

Guests at Six Senses
Fort Barwara get a sleep
kit as part of a complete rejuvenation programme

Luxury bed linen brands
even use hemp and banana fabrics to give consumers
the perfect sleep

Moksha Himalaya Spa
Resort offers a wellness
retreat with panoramic views of the mountains

quicker and deeper sleep. Aheli Spa recommends an 'Essential Ritual therapy' involving specialised techniques to foster physical and psychological balance," says Kush Kapoor, the company's CEO. The cost of therapy for in-house guests is ₹10,000.

HI-TECH SLUMBER

As the world evolves towards smarter living, people are also looking for smart products that can enhance the quality of their sleep at homes. Wearable devices are increasing in popularity as they use AI algorithms to track and analyse sleep data, offer valuable insights into the quality of slumber, and prompt with reminders on when you need to turn off and rest. Companies are also innovating to create products that enhance the quality of sleep.

For instance, mattress makers have launched mattresses that can change their softness to suit different body types, weight or sleeping position. An example is The Sleep Company's mattresses with the patented SmartGRID tech developed in collaboration with DRDO scientists. "There are 2,500+ air channels that help our mattresses stay cool even in hot temperatures and unlike memory foam mattress, it doesn't retain body heat," says Co-founder Priyanka Salot. They are priced between ₹15,000 and ₹70,000.

Then there are smart beds. "Our smart bed Wave Plus comes with head and foot tilt, and various presets such as anti-snore mode, zero-gravity mode, and three massage modes that help the sleepers unwind before bedtime and aid a better sleep," says Mohanraj J., CEO of Duroflex. He believes that no two individuals are the same, so why should they not sleep on a bed that adjusts to each individual's comfort level. "Our firmness adjustable mattress, Neuma, lets sleepers personalise their side of the mattress as per their comfort," he says. Duroflex's sleep tech products cost between ₹50,000 and ₹1.3 lakh.

Luxury bed linen is also becoming popular. "While globally appreciated luxury brands such as Roberto Cavalli are aspirational for homeowners back home as the disposable income and interest in luxe living is evolving by the day, demand for luxury bedding is growing too," says Sachin Chauhan, Director at Maison by Nirmals, a bed linen brand. Luxury bed linen firms today use the best natural materials such as silk, cotton, linen or even experiential and new fabrics such as hemp, bamboo and even banana fabrics to give consumers perfect sleep. "Our luxury linen range starts from ₹19,000 for a bed sheet set and can go up to ₹1.25 lakh," says Chauhan, adding that prices can go even higher for embellished decorative bed covers.

The rise of sleep tourism represents a paradigm shift in the way people are perceiving and approaching travel. With the surge in demand for sleep-focussed travel packages, the industry is poised to embrace innovation and cater to the evolving demands of those looking for complete rejuvenating travel experience. So, as the world continues its relentless spin, let the value of sleep shine even brighter. Prioritise it, savour it, and nurture it, for it is in the realm of rest that we find the strength to conquer the waking world. BT

@sakshibatra18