

▲ À LA MODE

Bollywood celebrity Alia Bhatt earlier this year became Gucci's first global brand ambassador from India

The luxury goods market in India is expected to grow to ₹82,186 crore by 2027 from ₹53,561 crore in 2022

This aligns with India's burgeoning affluent consumer demographic. A 2023 Wealth Report by Knight Frank projects a 58.4 per cent growth in India's ultra-high-net-worth individuals (UHNWIs)—those with a net worth of over $30 million—over the next five years, with the number expected to reach 19,119 by 2027. The billionaire count is likely to grow from 161 in 2022 to 195 in 2027. And according to the recently released 360 ONE Wealth Hurun India Rich List 2023, India had a record 1,319 individuals with a net worth of more than ₹1,000 crore.

INDIAN LUXE GOES GLOBAL

Meanwhile, Indian fashion is enjoying its moment on global ramps and red carpets. This year, pop queen Beyonce wore three different saree gowns and body suits by couturier Gaurav Gupta for her Renaissance World Tour concerts. The launch of the Nita Mukesh Ambani Cultural Centre (NMACC) in Mumbai earlier this year saw the likes of Zendaya dressed in an outfit by Rahul Mishra, who in September launched his ready-to-wear label called AFEW Rahul Mishra at the Palais de Tokyo in Paris.

Other designers who made an appearance on global ramps such as the New York Fashion Week, Paris Fashion Week and Milan Fashion Week include Falguni and Shane Peacock, Kanika Goyal, and Dhruv Kapoor, among others.

That's not all. From fashion designer Sabyasachi Mukherjee opening a store in New York to Dior holding a landmark Pre-Fall 2023 show in Mumbai this March, it's truly a case of Indian luxe, global flex. BT

@smitabw