

VULCAIN CRICKET NAUTICAL

► Now here's a watch that pays tribute to the history of scuba diving. In 1961, Vulcain launched a diving watch with an underwater alarm mechanism that signaled when it was time to resurface. The brand has re-introduced the Cricket Nautical in two new limited edition versions—Lagoon (with a blue dial) in a limited edition of 25 pieces, and Deep Black limited to 50 pieces. Both models embrace the latest watchmaking advances, yet retain the original Cricket Nautical vintage spirit, including the Cricket V-10 manual caliber that ensures its hallmark alarm rings for up to 20 seconds underwater. Price: $4,500

68 |

BREITLING NAVITIMER 36 AND 32

► The Navitimer was first introduced in 1952 as a tool for pilots and has gone on to become one of the most recognisable watches. Now, it has been launched in two new sizes—36 mm and 32 mm—featuring mother-of-pearl dials, lab-grown diamonds and 18k rose gold, giving the legendary navigational watch a versatile elegance. Price on request.