limited due to a lack of a standardised framework, independent valuation and proper due-diligence”. Taking note of such concerns, India’s markets regulator Sebi has recently proposed bringing fractional ownership platforms under its ambit. Nadar says that HNI participation in the model would also increase as a regulatory framework will encourage consolidation and maturity on the supply side.

Apart from real estate, yachts and private jets are also on the co-owners’ radar. The market for these, however, is still nascent, says Sotheby’s Goyal. He cites the unsuitability of Indian cities to house or host yachts as one of its biggest disadvantages. “That’s why yachts that are parked in India and owned by Indians are rare.” Bengaluru-based Champion Yacht Club is among the handful of firms that offer fractional ownership of luxury yachts. Costing ₹1.25-24 crore per share, a fractional owner may enjoy six weeks on his or her yacht every year. Meanwhile, fractional ownership of private jets is a relatively larger market, and growing due to the increasing numbers of HNIs in the country. Moreover, unlike yachts, private jets save time spent travelling even for business purposes instead of just pleasure, apart from providing a premium experience. That, experts say, plays to the jets’ advantage.

Whether it’s private jets, yachts or second homes at coveted holiday destinations, with fractional ownership fast catching on, luxury as you know it is surely getting redefined. BT
