

WHATSAPP'S INDIA BUSINESS BET

THE VALUE EXTRACTION CHALLENGE

WhatsApp's monetisation question looms large as the platform, used for private messaging, isn't favourable to advertising

For revenue generation, WhatsApp has experimented with charging customers $1 per year and launching WhatsApp Pay, among others, but with limited success

India, WhatsApp's largest market with over 400 million users, is set to cross $1 billion in revenues, per analysts. Thus, it is considered a global growth driver for its parent Meta

Meta CEO Mark Zuckerberg says India leads the world in consumers and businesses using messaging as a better method to do business

However, Meta faces an uphill battle in India from a monetisation perspective, as the country ranks relatively low in terms of revenue generated by the WhatsApp Business App globally
