

CLARIDGE'S, LONDON

The Claridge's in London has been celebrating this classic English tradition for nearly 150 years. Its menu follows the traditional combination of sweet and savoury—think poached Scottish salmon, finger sandwiches, warm scones and pastries that change daily to reflect the fruits of the season. Served in the Foyer, inspired by the 1930s heyday of art deco, with the very finest bone china and silverware, it truly is fit for royalty. Tea connoisseur Henrietta Lovell has scoured the world to craft a menu of interesting teas including a White Silver Tip from the mountains of Fujian in China.

PRICE: £105 for adults; £45 for children

| 81

THE RITZ, LONDON

Considering the tradition was started in London, it is little wonder that institutions such as The Ritz are known for their afternoon tea. Enjoy finely cut sandwiches, freshly baked scones with Cornish clotted cream and strawberry preserve, and get transported to the world of Enid Blyton. Of course, the highlight is the tea itself. The Ritz has a certified tea sommelier who travels around the world to various tea plantations to source the most wonderful flavours, 18 of which are available in the afternoon. Enjoy beautiful melodies by the in-house pianist and harpist as you admire your surroundings and may be add a glass of champagne to make the afternoon extra special.

PRICE: £72 for adults; £50 for children